The Entrepreneurship Clinic at the University of Michigan Law School has provided no-cost legal services to dozens of student-led start-ups since its inception in January 2012.

“The clinic allowed me to work with entrepreneurs in their very early stages and learn what matters to them. It was excellent practice to have that client-attorney interaction from the start. I was very happy the clinic was an option and I was able to gain practice as a lawyer while still in law school.”

SHEILA DUNNING, ’12

“You’re getting top-notch legal work, and it’s free? With a start-up, I can’t tell you how valuable that is. We probably got thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of legal work at no charge.”

CLIENT AND FETCHNOTES COFOUNDER ALEX SCHIFF

Through this clinic, law students hone and develop the skills needed to serve as trustworthy advisors to early-stage companies.
