

The University of Michigan Law School Dual Degree Program

Law & Chinese Studies JD/MA

The University of Michigan Law School and the Center for Chinese Studies within the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies offer a dual degree program that will lead to both the Juris Doctor (JD) and Master of Arts (MA) degrees. Through this program, all requirements for both degrees can be completed in 3.5 to 4 years of concurrent enrollment.

With this program, the University of Michigan Law School combines with the world-renowned Center for Chinese Studies at Michigan to become one of the nation's leading centers for the study of Chinese Law. The Law and Chinese Studies dual degree recognizes the growing need for specialists who combine training in law with substantive knowledge of the language, culture, politics, economics, and history of the Chinese world. Students completing the dual degree will be better prepared to operate in an ever-globalizing world.

Students admitted to the dual degree program in Law and Chinese Studies are required to earn credit in each program. Beyond certain basic requirements, students generally are not restricted in their selection of courses in the Law School.

Basic Requirements for the JD

Students entering the Law School must complete the required first-year law curriculum.

The JD requires a minimum total of 82 credits, earned between Law School courses and courses at the Center for Chinese Studies through the Rackham School of Graduate Studies. Students must earn at least 70 credits toward the JD through courses taken in the Law School.

Law students are required to complete a course in professional responsibility, a course in transnational law, and an upper-class writing requirement.

Twelve (12) credit hours may be earned through courses taken in Chinese Studies. Credits may be counted as long as they represent work for graduate level courses in which a B- or better is earned. Instructions for requesting Law School credit for non-law courses are posted on the CTools site for dual degree students.

Basic Requirements for the MA

Students must complete a minimum of 24 credit hours in Chinese Studies, in addition to any credit hours needed to satisfy the language requirement. Students must complete a master's thesis to be awarded the MA in Chinese Studies.

Six (6) credit hours may be earned through courses taken in the Law School.

Additional Requirements

Applicants must gain separate and independent admission to both the Law School and the Center for Chinese Studies, affiliated with the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies, and should contact the admissions office of each school for application and admission information. The applicant's LSAT score may be used in place of the GRE.*

Students must satisfy the requirements of each degree program and should consult with advisors in each school for the precise graduation requirements for each degree. Students should not expect any Law courses beyond first-year courses to be offered in the summer term. Students will not receive credit toward the JD for coursework taken prior to matriculation at the Law School. Students should consult with their Chinese Studies advisor concerning credit toward the MA for Law course work.

Tuition will be assessed at either the Law School or the Graduate School rate, whichever is higher, when courses toward both degrees are taken in one term.

At the beginning of their final year of study in the combined program, students should consult with both their Rackham academic advisor and the Law School Registrar regarding forms that need to be completed prior to graduation. Also at this time, students should submit a Dual/Joint Degree Election Form (<http://www.rackham.umich.edu/downloads/oard/forms/dualjoint6010.pdf>) for approval from both the Law School and the Center for Chinese Studies. Students should review the completed sample forms on the CTools page prior to filling out the form. Students may also consult with the Office of Student Affairs if there are any questions regarding completion of this form.

The dual degree program is not open to those who have already earned either the JD or the MA in Chinese Studies. Students who are registered in the first or second year at the Law School may apply for admission to the dual degree program.
