The University of Michigan Law School has developed a semester study abroad opportunity with the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies (IHEID) in Geneva, for up to two students per academic year. Students may go in either semester. IHEID, an independent graduate school associated with the University of Geneva, is thought by many to be the best international law and relations institute on the continent. IHEID offers an opportunity for our students to study at a distinguished institution which is located in a very international city and draws students from all over the world.

IHEID is located in the City of Geneva, which is a lovely, livable and centrally located city. Modest in size (185,000 in the city; 440,000 in the canton), cosmopolitan (45% foreign population, with English spoken almost as readily as French), Geneva has terrific culture, food, parks, and shopping. It is easy to bicycle around the city. The French and Swiss Alps are close by. Paris, Milan, and the Mediterranean are reachable in less than four hours by high-speed train. The close-in airport has numerous non-stop flights to cities in Europe and worldwide. No other foreign city has as strong a presence of international organization as Geneva. In addition, dozens of international nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) are based in and around Geneva. Geneva is truly an international city, bringing together policy makers, diplomats, advocates, and many other types of professionals whose work focuses on the most challenging global issues of the day. It is a city which draws people from around the world with an interest in international affairs.

Interested students must comply with the General Guidelines for Semester Legal Studies Abroad available in the Center for International and Comparative Law, 300D Legal Research, or on the Law School web site at: <http://www.law.umich.edu/curriculum/studyabroad/Pages/default.aspx>. Please consult the General Guidelines along with this document. They contain important information, including how to apply.

Course Offerings and Requirements

Michigan students will study primarily in the International Law Unit.

The languages of instruction are English and French, but whatever the language, it is possible to take the exams or write the papers in English. It is possible to take only courses offered in English, but the curricular offerings are more extensive if the Michigan student is sufficiently proficient in French to take courses offered in French.

For information concerning courses which are offered in 2009-2010, please click on "Etunet" at the bottom right-hand corner of IHEID's home page: <http://graduateinstitute.ch>, and then on "Course Catalogue" under Documents 09-10. Page 14 of the PDF document lists this year's law courses. The full list of all courses offered by the IHEID International Law Unit is also available on the International Law Unit web site: <http://graduateinstitute.ch/law> - click on "International Law Courses", then on "Full List of International Law Courses 2009-2010", and then on "MIS Law Specialist Courses". IHEID has informed us that for the MIS (Master in International Studies specializing in Law) program, the compulsory courses listed in the Course Catalogue are not appropriate for our students, so the relevant courses are those listed as elective courses. When you review the list, please remember that IHEID's autumn term is Michigan's fall term, and their spring term is similar to our winter term. Each law course carries two US credit hours and meets once a week. In the Course Catalogue, you can also see the list of non-law course options available in other Units at IHEID (In particular, International Economics, International History and Politics, Political Science, and International Affairs). For a list of which courses offered by other Units are available to students to study, refer to the list for each Unit under the heading of "Complementary Courses To Be Chosen Outside The Discipline of Specialization". The International Law Unit has indicated it will try to make it possible for Michigan students to take non-law classes in other Units. Such classes would be counted toward the 12 credits of non-law that Michigan students can count toward their JDs.

In addition to the course requirements at IHEID, students will be responsible for fulfilling all the requirements for the transfer of credit described in the General Guidelines for Semester Legal Studies Abroad.

A student's course selection at IHEID must be approved by the University of Michigan Law School prior to the student's departure for Geneva. Any subsequent requested changes must be approved in advance by Assistant Dean Virginia Gordan (vgordan@umich.edu; TEL: 734-764-5269). The acceptance of any credit or grade for any course taken in IHEID is subject to determination by the University of Michigan Law School.

Tuition and Fees

The tuition and fees charges at IHEID are waived for students who participate in this exchange program.

Michigan students must pay full tuition and fees to the University of Michigan Law School as described in the General Guidelines for Semester Legal Studies Abroad.

Please note that the tuition structure and amount are subject to change at any time.

Dates of Term

IHEID's autumn term is Michigan's fall term, and their spring term is similar to our winter term. Students may go in either the fall or winter semester. IHEID's 2009 autumn term (our fall term) runs from September 14 to December 18, 2009, and its 2010 spring term (similar to our winter term) runs from February 22 to June 4, 2010. The 2009-10 academic calendar may be found here: http://graduateinstitute.ch/corporate/cal_academic.html.

Exam dates are fixed by the professor teaching the course. Normally, exams should be finished by the last day of the semester, i.e. December 18, 2009 for the autumn semester (our fall term), and June 4, 2010 for the spring semester (similar to our winter term). The student will be informed at the beginning of the course when the exams will take place. For many courses, a paper is required (in lieu of an exam), and this paper is normally due before the last day of class. Again, the due dates for papers will be discussed at the commencement of each course.

An orientation day for students is organized at the beginning of both terms and usually takes place on the first day of the term. More information about these orientation days is provided (via email) to the students by the Exchanges and Mobility Office of the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies.

Housing

IHEID has only a very small number of rooms, and they are always occupied well in advance. Students are expected to do their own research by using the Housing Services of the University of Geneva <http://www.unige.ch/dase/bulog/accueil.html>. (This web site is in French.) The Housing Services of the University of Geneva will help students; however, they cannot guarantee accommodation.

Students are strongly encouraged to read the Student Study Abroad Reports available at the Center for International & Comparative Law (300D Legal Research). The reports contain invaluable information about courses, professors, library, computers, housing and so on. They identify the pluses and minuses of the students’ study abroad experiences and what aspects they enjoyed and what they found problematic while studying at IHEID.
