The court shall order a partial payment of filing fees according to the prisoner’s ability to pay.”.

TITLE IV—ENHANCING PROTECTION AGAINST INCARCERATED CRIMINALS

SEC. 401. PRISON SECURITY.

(a) In General.—Chapter 303 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:
Purpose and Summary

The purpose of H.R. 667 is to enable states to deal more effectively with violent crime. To that end, the bill provides more resources to states to expand their prison capacity for incarcerating criminals. Furthermore, it limits prisoner lawsuits by requiring the exhaustion of administrative remedies prior to a civil suit and restricts the ability of Federal judges to affect the conditions of prisons and jails beyond what is required by Constitution and Federal law.

The bill includes four titles. Titles I and II are nearly identical to titles I and VII respectively of H.R. 3, the "Taking Back Our Government and Our Communities Act of 1995." Title III incorporates the provisions of H.R. 1634, the "Stop Turning Out Prisoners Act," and Title IV addresses the problem of prison violence associated with weight-lifting equipment.

The bill provides nearly $10.3 billion dollars to assist states expand their prison capacity for violent criminals, an increase of more than $2 billion over last year's crime bill. It rewards states for getting serious with violent criminals. If states impose longer sentences and requiring them to serve portions of their sentences, then these states will qualify for substantial grants for six years to help defray the costs of incarcerating more dangerous criminals. Moreover, if states go as far as truth-in-sentencing and require violent criminals to serve at least 85 percent of their sentences, then they will qualify for substantial grant funds.

Stopping Abusive Prisoner Lawsuits—places sensible limits on the ability of detained persons to challenge the legality of their imprisonment. Too many frivolous lawsuits are clogging the courts and seriously undermining the administration of justice. The bill requires that all administrative remedies be exhausted before a prisoner initiating a civil rights action in court. It requires the court to dismiss any prisoner suit if it fails to state a legitimate claim of a violation for which relief can be granted. If the suit is frivolous or malicious. And third, it eliminates the requirement that minimum standards of acceptable prison conditions be developed with the input of prisoners. Under section 74048, convicted criminals will no longer be helping to define the conditions of their imprisonment should be.

Strength-training of prisoners prohibited

The Bureau of Prisons shall ensure that—
(1) prisoners under its jurisdiction do not engage in any physical activities designed to increase their fighting ability; and
(2) all equipment designed for increasing the strength or fighting ability of prisoners promptly be removed from Federal correctional facilities and not be introduced into such facilities thereafter except as needed for a medically required program of physical rehabilitation approved by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons.

Amendments—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 303 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

Strength-training of prisoners prohibited.
limits court-ordered relief to those specific conditions affecting an individual plaintiff, and requires the court to consider the potential impact of such relief on public safety. Title III includes provisions that will guard against court-ordered caps dragging on with nothing but the whims of federal judges sustaining them. It allows law enforcement officials who arrest, prosecute, or incarcerate criminals to challenge any relief that would affect their localities if that relief was granted in the absence of an actual finding by the court that the conditions violated a Federal right. And it places reasonable restrictions on attorney's fees.

Title IV prohibits weight-lifting by federal prisoners, and requires the removal of weight-lifting equipment from federal correctional facilities.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

Every year in America thousands of people are killed, raped or assaulted by dangerous criminals who are known by the criminal justice system to be severe threats to public safety. The reason such criminals are in the communities and not behind bars is often because there is simply not enough prison space to hold them.

Most people, but especially police and prosecutors, know that a relatively small group of dangerous criminals keep cycling through the system. They get arrested, sometimes convicted, occasionally sent to prison, and then they are almost always released early after serving only a small fraction of their sentences. This "revolving door of justice" has plagued the nation for too long.

The statistics have become familiar to many. Violent criminals in state prisons only serve an average of 38 percent of their actual sentences. In state criminal justice systems, convicted murderers are given average prison sentences of 20 years in length, but they only serve about 8.5 years. For rape, the sentence is 13 years, but the time served in only 5 years. It's no surprise that more than thirty percent of all murders are committed by criminals on bail, probation or parole at the time of their attacks.

Title I of H.R. 667 rewards states that are bearing high fiscal costs for taking the necessary step of getting and keeping violent criminals off the streets.

The Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 failed to address this problem. Its reverter clause allowed funds to be awarded even if states made no move toward truth-in-sentencing. Title I provides the opportunity to right those wrongs, and to support sensible reforms that are long overdue.

Title II—Stopping Abusive Prisoner Lawsuits—addresses the problem of frivolous lawsuits. Too often prisoners initiate suits which are frivolous, malicious, or fail to state a claim for which relief can be granted. Such suits clog the courts, waste law enforcement resources, and hinder localities in their efforts to fight crime.

Title III—Stop Turning Out Prisoners—addresses the problem of federal court-imposed prison population caps by limiting the remedies that can be granted or enforced by a court in a prison conditions suit alleging a violation of a federal right. Courts hearing such suits have often approved and enforced consent decrees giving expansive relief to the complaining inmates. While both state courts and federal courts have in some instances entered these unnecessarily broad consent decrees, it is the federal courts that, often with seemingly good intentions, used these consent decrees to meddle into a state criminal justice system and seriously undermine the ability of the local justice system to dispense any true justice.

Population caps are a primary cause of “revolving door justice.” The statistics alone do not reflect the incalculable losses to local communities caused by criminals confident in their belief that the criminal justice system is powerless is stop them. In Philadelphia, 100 persons have been murdered by criminals set free by the population cap. The Subcommittee on Crime heard compelling testimony from Detective Patrick Boyle, a twenty-eight-year man of the Philadelphia Police Department. He spoke of the day problems faced by police officers on the streets when breakers know that the Philadelphia criminal justice system is less to incarcerate them because of a federal court-ordered cap. Detective Boyle also spoke as a victim of crime. Detective Boyle’s son, a rookie Philadelphia Police Office, was murdered he stopped a car stolen by a criminal defendant who had repeatedly released because of the federal prison cap order.

IV—Enhancing Protection Against Incarcerated Criminals requires that the Bureau of Prisons ensure that federal pris do not engage in any activities designed to increase their abilities, and that all weight-lifting equipment be removed federal prisons. The title addressed the problem of prisoners their period of incarceration to becoming more physically through intensive weight-lifting, as well as the prison violence in which weight-lifting equipment is used as.

Together, the four titles of H.R. 667 represent a long over by the federal government to assist states in their efforts with violent crime.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

In compliance with clause 2(l)(C)(3) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee sets forth, with respect to H.R. 667, the following estimate and comparison prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 3102 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974;

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,

HENRY J. HYDE,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 667, the Violent Criminal Incarceration Act of 1995. The enactment of H.R. 667 could affect direct spending or receipts. Pay-as-you-go procedures would apply to the bill. For further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them.

Sincerely,

ROBERT D. REISCHAUER, Director.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

Number: H.R. 667.
Title: Violent Criminal Incarceration Act of 1995.
Status: As ordered by the House Committee on the Judiciary on January 1, 1995.
Purpose: H.R. 667 would repeal the truth-in-sentencing incentive grant program enacted in Title II of the Violent Crime Law Enforcement Act of 1994 and replace it with two incentive grant programs. H.R. 667 also would repeal the... drug court grant program under Title V of the 1994 crime bill be eligible for the first type of grant (general grants), states increase the incarceration rate, average time served, and the age of sentence served for violent offenders. To be eligible for the second type of grant (truth-in-sentencing grants), states must adopt truth-in-sentencing laws and laws requiring that the victim, defendant or the family of such victims be given the opportunity to be heard on the issue of sentencing and any post-conviction appeal.

Title II of H.R. 667 would address prisoner litigation reforms. One provision would require the exhaust of administrative remedies before a complaint would be referred to a federal court. Another provision would provide federal courts with authority to dismiss a case if they determined that an action was frivolous or malicious or lacking a valid claim under which could be granted. In addition, the bill would allow the courts to review a prisoner's statement of assets obtained or prisoner's place of incarceration when determining whether to waive part or all of a civil filing fee. Title II would permit courts to limit the relief awarded prisoners in certain civil cases, including attorney's fees. Title IV would ban weight lifting and other strength training for federal inmates.

5. Estimated cost to the Federal Government: H.R. 667 would increase the authorization for appropriations for incarceration in the 1994 crime bill from $7.7 billion to $10.5 billion dollars over the 1995-2000 period. At the same time, H.R. 667 would repeal existing authorizations of $0.9 billion for drug court grants. H.R. 667 would result in a net increase in authorizations of $1.9 billion dollars over the 1995-2000 period. The following table provides year-by-year estimates of the federal cost for H.R. 667.

The costs of this bill fall within budget function 750.

For purposes of this estimate, CBO assumes that the amount authorized by the bill would be appropriated for each fiscal year that outlays would reflect the historical spending patterns of similar grant programs. The additional authorization for 1995 is assumed to be provided in a supplemental appropriation following enactment of this bill.

To the extent that the provisions affecting prisoner litigation would deter cases from being filed or from moving forward, the federal court system could realize some savings. However, based on information from the Administrative Office of the United States Courts (AOUSC), CBO does not expect that the number of civil cases filed by federal prisoners would be reduced significantly by enactment of these provisions. In addition, to the extent that the requirement for the statement of assets would serve as an economic incentive for filing claims, the federal government also could realize some savings in court costs. However, according to the GUSC any such savings would be insignificant and possibly offset increased administrative costs incurred for processing the statement of assets.

Comparison with spending under current law: Appropriations for the drug court and incarceration grants authorized in the 1994 bill total $53 million for fiscal year 1995. H.R. 667 would authorize additional grants of $179 million for 1995, and much larger grants in subsequent years. The following table provides a comparison of the current-year appropriation with the gross authorization contained in H.R. 667.

Pay-as-you-go considerations: CBO estimates that by restricting attorney’s fees would be awarded prevailing prisoners for certain cases, the federal government could realize some savings in direct spending because these fees would be paid out of the Claims, Judgments and Relief Acts account. CBO cannot estimate either the likelihood or the magnitude of savings from this account because there is no basis for estimating either the outcome of possible litigation or the amount of eventual compensation.

Estimated cost to State and local governments: The amounts authorized for appropriation would be used to make grants to recipients. The cost of the projects for which the grants are intended would be required to fund at least 25 percent of the cost of the projects for which the grants are intended. Appropriations for these grants, states must provide assurance that they have enacted stricter laws and regulations relating to sentenced veterans’ benefits, and will share funds with local governments for the construction or expansion of correctional facilities. The funds for the grants would be allocated according to a formula specified in the bill, and any remaining would be allocated to each state according to population of incarcerated veterans. While many states may not currently qualify for these grants under the strict sentencing guidelines, those states could receive funding after the incarceration grants are distributed. If states meet the qualification requirements for receiving grants authorized by H.R. 667, CBO estimates that the resulting authorization would total at least $415 million over the 1995–2000 period. Some of this funding would, in turn, assist states in constructing or expanding correctional facilities necessary to meet the sentencing requirements of H.R. 667.

Courts under this bill also could realize some savings that prison litigation is reduced. In particular, CBO estimates that the states would benefit by the provision that would allow courts to dismiss frivolous cases without first hear-victims have had an opportunity to be heard regarding the proposed release.

The committee expects that the public hearing requirement will discourage the early release of offenders who should not be released as a matter of sound policy, even though they may technically qualify for such release.

Sec. 505. Formula for grants.

This section establishes the formula for disbursing the funds to eligible states. Under paragraph (1), no eligible state is to receive less than $500,000 or .40 percent of the total annual funding, whichever is greater. And under paragraph (2), eligible states receive an additional amount based on population from the funds remaining after the allocation in paragraph (1) is made. Specifically, the additional amount is the amount which bears the same ratio to the remaining funds as the ratio that the population of the state of compact bears to the population of all states.

Sec. 506. Accountability

This section seeks to ensure accountability over the grant funds and requires recipient states to use accounting, audit and fiscal procedures that conform to the guidelines to be prescribed by the Attorney General, and to submit annual reports.

Sec. 507. Authorization of appropriations

Subsection (a) authorizes nearly $10.3 billion for fiscal years 1996 through 2000 to carry out this title. Subsection (b) requires that no funds received under this title supplant state funds, and that the federal share of any proposal funded under this title not exceed 75 percent.

TITLE II—STOPPING ABUSIVE PRISONER LAWSUITS

Sec. 201. Exhaustion requirement

Currently, the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act authorizes federal courts to suspend civil rights suits brought by prisoners pursuant to 42 U.S.C. sec. 1983 for 180 days while the prisoner exhausts available administrative remedies. This section requires prisoners to exhaust all available administrative remedies before filing a civil rights action in a federal court.

Sec. 202. Frivolous actions

An enormous burden is currently placed on state officials to respond to prisoner suits which lack merit and are often brought for the purpose of harassment or recreation. This section requires a federal court, on its own motion or another's motion, to dismiss a civil rights action brought by a prisoner if the action fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted or is frivolous or malicious, thereby eliminating the need for defendants to use resources responding to meritless claims.

Sec. 203. Modification of required minimum standards

The Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons act requires the promulgation of minimum standards of acceptable prison conditions to be used in the administrative procedures for resolving grievances. It further requires that such standards be developed with the advice of inmates. Section 203 eliminates the requirement that prisoners contribute to the development of those standards.

Sec. 204. Proceedings in forma pauperis

The present standard for sua sponte dismissal of complaints filed by prisoners seeking in forma pauperis status allows dismissal only if the complaint is frivolous or malicious, or if the allegation of poverty is untrue.

This section requires dismissal of a complaint brought in forma pauperis if the complaint fails to state claim upon which relief may be granted, or if frivolous or malicious, or untrue.

Section 204 adds subsection (f) to 28 U.S.C. 1915. Subsection (f) requires a prison inmate to include a statement of his or her assets in any affidavit filed in forma pauperis. It also requires the court to verify the statement of assets by making inquiry of the correctional institution in which the prisoner is incarcerated and impose or partial payment of filing fees according to the prisoner's ability to pay.

TITLE III—STOP TURNING OUT PRISONERS

Chapter 1. Appropriation remedies for prison conditions

This section would amend Section 3626 of title 18, United States Code, to require a court to grant or approve relief for a plaintiff in a prison conditions suit only if that plaintiff can prove a violation of his own federal rights. Such a requirement is not novel, but is in complete harmony with federal requirements. Through this requirement, Congress is requiring courts that standing must be the threshold inquiry in prison conditions cases just as it is in any other case. The reference to "individual standing" is a reminder to the courts that the principles of standing established by the Constitution's case or controversy require that a plaintiff must demonstrate that he himself has suffered the complained-of injury in fact—an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) particularized and (b) actual or imminent, not 'conjectural' or 'hypothetical'—an injury in fact that the party seeking review be himself among the injured.

The Court agreed with the inmate that the condition about which he complained, namely tobacco smoke (ETS), could possibly constitute cruel and unusual punishment. The Court also concluded that, to prove an Eighth Amendment violation, the inmate must demonstrate that he himself is being exposed to unreasonably high levels of ETS. See also Farmer v. Brennan, 114 S. Ct. 1979, 1977 (for an Eighth Amendment violation, the inmate must demonstrate that he is being exposed to unreasonably high levels of ETS).
Subsection (a)(1) limits the remedial scheme a court may order to give appropriate consideration, in selecting or approving a remedy, to any potential impact on public safety or the criminal justice system. The subsection reasonably and permissibly limits the use of court-enforced consent decrees to resolve prison conditions suits.

Amendment claim an "inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm" (emphasis added); Wilson v. Seiter, 111 S. Ct. 2329, 2332 (1991) ("a prisoner advancing [an Eighth Amendment] claim must, at a minimum, allege deliberate indifference to his medical needs" (emphasis added)). Similarly, as the instant status remains lower courts, an individual inmate who has not been subjected to constitutionally excessive punishment or violation of some other federal right.

An inmate who has not suffered in the least is not entitled to any damages or other relief merely because some other inmate in the same or a related facility may have suffered cruel and unusual punishment or violation of some other federal right. See, e.g., Bauder v. Dowd, 797 F. 2d 661, 674 (8th Cir. 1982) (court rejected inmate claim for injunctive relief from allegedly cruel and unusual practices because the relief from allegedly cruel and unusual practices because the relief he requested would "only benefit other inmates, particularly new inmates"); Whillock v. Doulgas City, 16 F. 3d 954 (9th Cir. 1994) (notwithstanding the exceedingly unsanitary condition of the facilities failed to prove plaintiff inmates had not been violated because they were held in prison for a brief period of time; other inmates held in those same areas for a prolonged period of time could suffer constitutionally significant harm).

In order to alleviate the suffering of an inmate actually subjected to cruel and unusual punishment, it is possible that a court might find it necessary to order relief which had the intentional effect of granting a windfall benefit to inmates who have never suffered. This practical consequence of certain remedies, however, does not endow the inmate who bas had his right violated with any right to bring a lawsuit in the first place in order to obtain that windfall benefit.

By relying on the Supreme Court's law interpreting the Constitution's standing requirements, Congress had done nothing more in this provision with regard to standing than codify the existing Supreme Court law that is being trampled by some courts. There has been no intrusion upon the Supreme Court's role in interpreting the Constitution. "Congress may codify or clarify existing law without performing a meaningless act." In re Intern. Harvester's Disp. of Wis. Steel Ltd., 661 F. Supp. 512, 521 (N.D. Ill. 1988); see also United States v. Vany, 827 F.2d 83, 88 (7th Cir. 1987). In particular, Congress is fully entitled "to codify existing law concerning a defendant's constitutional rights." United States v. Alessandro, 637 F.2d 131, 138 (3d Cir. 1980) (in Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 43, which concerns a defendant's right to be present at every stage of his trial. Congress explicitly codified that protections of the Fifth Amendment Confrontation Clause and the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment, cert. denied, 451 U.S. 949, 101 S. Ct. 2031 (1981); see United States v. Reiter, 897 F.2d 639, 642 (2d Cir. 1990) (same); S.E.C. v. Kimmes, 759 F. Supp. 430, 437 (N.D. Ill. 1991) (same) see also Commonwealth v. Departmental Grant Appeals Bd., 815 F.2d 778, 784 (3d Cir. 1987) (Congress intended provisions in Administrative Procedure Act on district court jurisdiction "to codify the existing law concerning ripeness and exhaustion of remedies").

The intent to enact a statute of codify existing law or clarify current law that is uncertain and confusing, see Vaz Borracho v. Keydril Co., 710 F.2d 207, 212 (5th Cir. 1983), or as here, Congress may chose to codify existing law when at least some lower courts are failing to properly apply the law. See In re Kroy (Europe) Ltd., 27 F.3d 367, 370 (9th Cir. 1994) (finding that Congress intended to codify and clarify existing law that certain expenses were not deductible, the court noted that one court had found the expenses were deductible). Codification of existing law serves to reign in lower courts whose wayward actions cannot all be reviewed by the Supreme Court but which are causing enormous harm to the public.

By requiring courts to grant or approve relief constituting the least intrusive means of curing an actual violation of a federal right, the provision stops judges from imposing remedies intended to effect a overall modernization of local prison systems or provide an overall improvement in prison conditions. The provision limits remedies to those necessary to remedy the present violation of federal rights.

The decision of the provision are not a departure from current jurisprudence concerning injunctive relief. "In granting injunctive relief, the court's remedy should be no broader than necessary to provide full relief to the aggrieved plaintiff." McKendall v. Continental Can Co., 903 F.2d 1171, 1182 (3d Cir. 1990) (citations omitted). This rule also applies to constitutional violations. See Millicent v. Bradley, 493 U.S. 267, 97 S. Ct. 2749, 2757 (1977) (remedy must be related to the condition that offends the Constitution); Toussaint v. McCarthy, 601 F.2d 1080, 1086 (9th Cir. 1979) (injunctive relief must be "no broader than necessary to remedy the constitution violation") cert. denied, 448 U.S. 1069 (1987).

The use of the word "shall" in this provision creates a mandatory, not a discretionary duty on the part of the federal judge to limit relief in prison conditions suits as directed by Congress, e.g., United States v. Monsanto, 491 U.S. 600, 109 S. Ct. 2657, 2662 (1989) (The Comprehensive Forfeiture act states that a sentencing court "shall order" forfeiture of certain property. The Court stated, "Congress could not have chosen stronger words to express its intent to have the court order forfeiture of certain property.") See Yungkay v. United States, 329 U.S. 492, 67 S. Ct. 426, 430 (1947) ("The word 'shall' is ordinarily The Language of command." (cite omitted)).
while freely allowing the use of private settlement agreements. Parties may continue to enter such agreements to avoid lengthy and burdensome litigation, but they cannot expect to rely on the court to enforce the agreement.

Subsection (a)(1) is further intended to prohibit state courts as well as federal courts from granting or enforcing unnecessary and burdensome remedies in prison conditions suits. Inmates often bring their suits in federal court, rather than in state court, because they have found that federal judges are at times more willing than are local judges to impose requirements on local officials. But inmates are legally entitled to bring suits in state courts asking the state courts to provide remedies for purported violations of federal rights. Some inmates have already brought such suits in state courts. By limiting the remedies that state courts, as well as federal courts, may provide, this provision insures that inmates will simply run from the federal courthouse to the state courthouse and the same suits and to demand the same burdensome and unnecessary relief that the federal courts have irresponsibly imposed on local judicial systems. This provision would not, however, exclude state legislators from granting additional remedies as a matter of state law.

Subsection (a)(2): Prison population reduction relief

This subsection makes prison caps the remedy of last resort, permitting a cap to be imposed only if the prisoner proves: (1) that overcrowding is the “primary” cause of the federal violation; and (2) no other remedy will cure the violation. These requirements are imposed in recognition of the severe, adverse effects of prison and the accompanying prisoner releases relied on to meet the need for prison caps must be the remedy of last resort, a court still retaining the power to order this remedy despite its intrusive nature and the harmful consequences to the public if, but only if, it is truly necessary to prevent an actual violation of a prisoner’s federal constitutional rights based on the alleged overcrowding, this subsection will end the current practice of imposing prison caps in local prisons have complained about the prison caps, but the presiding judge has made absolutely no finding of institutionality or even held any trial on the allegations. In approving these caps, some judges now oversee huge plans of releases to keep the prison population down to whatever judge considers an appropriate level.

Subsection (b): Termination of relief

Paragraph (b)(1)—Automatic Termination of Prospective Relief

Five-Year Period—provides that in order to continue to receive beyond a two-year-period, the need for continued remedies to actual violations of federal rights must be proven. 4 While

4 Acting well within its authority in permitting a remedy to be provided for the act of a federal right but in placing a time limit on the remedy. For example, the Act of 1965 provides that, where a court has issued a declaratory judgment deter-this provision mandates automatic termination every two years that the party may seek a modification of a consent decree at an earlier based on the existing standard for modification contained in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b).

Paragraph (b)(2)—Immediate termination of prospective allowances a jurisdiction that is already subject to an existing consent decree that was entered with no finding of any constitutional violation, to move to terminate that decree. The provision appropriately prohibits courts from enforcing decrees that do not comply with existing standard for modification or termination. Moreover, under current law, there is little that the parties can do to require judges to rule promptly on their request. By providing for prospective relief that is subject to the motion will be stayed pending a final ruling on the merits of the motion. Such a motion will raise one question: whether the court has made an on-the-record finding of a federal violation. Such a potential violation should be on the basis of the official court record and not be subject to factual dispute.

All other motions, such as a motion to modify pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b), must be decided in 180 days. The consent decree relief is stayed.

This provision requiring that all relief be stayed if a motion is not promptly decided cannot be waived by the consent of the parties.

Paragraph (c)(2) provides that where any motion is stayed in a timely fashion, the ongoing relief in a consent decree entered in the absence of an actual finding of a federal violation must be decided within thirty days. Such a motion will raise one question: whether the court has made an on-the-record finding of a federal violation. Such a potential violation should be on the basis of the official court record and not be subject to factual dispute.

All other motions, such as a motion to modify pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b), must be decided in 180 days. The consent decree relief is stayed.

This provision requiring that all relief be stayed if a motion is not promptly decided cannot be waived by the consent of the parties.

Voting Rights Act or 1965, as amended, 42 U.S.C. § 1973b(a)(5). The reopening provision of the Voting Rights Act has remained unchallenged for over thirty years, despite constitutional attacks on the Act's other provisions and amendments, see e.g., South v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 86 S.Ct. 803, 15 L.Ed.2d 769 (1966). More recently, in City v. United States, 100 S.Ct. 1548 (1980), the Supreme Court had occasion to examine the language of §4(a), and recited without comment the section's “reopen provision in the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the two-year time limit in this amendment that the court can address the propriety of the decree at regular intervals.

Under the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a), the parties may ask the federal court to issue a writ of mandamus ordering the federal district court judge to rule on an extraordinary writ, mandamus is disfavored, see In re School Asbestos Litigations, 764, 772 (3d Cir. 1992), and "must be invoked sparingly," In re Asbestos School Litigations, 94–1494, slip op. at 9 (3d Cir., December 27, 1994), and rarely, if ever, will an appellate court grant a writ of mandamus to force a lower court to rule more quickly on a motion.
Subsection (d): Standing

This subsection allows Federal, state, and local government officials, including prosecutors, to intervene pursuant to Federal rule Civil Procedure 24(a)(1) by granting them the right to intervene in prison conditions cases so that they can challenge court-ordered prison population caps.

Law enforcement officials who arrest, prosecute, or incarcerate criminals are permitted, under this new provision, to challenge any relief that would affect their localities, asserting the significant safety concerns arising from such relief. The provisions of this subsection should be construed liberally so as to grant standing to a member of Congress, a governor, a member of a state legislature, or a member of a local unit of government, whose constituency is affected by such court-ordered relief.

Courts, particularly federal courts, have excluded some state officials such as district attorneys, from having any say about the disposition of such cases by concluding that these officials have no interest to intervene as parties under the current law embodied in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24(a)(2), which requires that the intervenor have an "interest" in the case. But completely apart from the "interest" rationale, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 11 requires that a party be allowed to intervene if he has been denied such a right by statute. Subsection (d) establishes such an interest to intervene for affected law enforcement officials.

With all motions in prison conditions suits, courts must rule on all motions to intervene promptly.

Subsection (e): Special masters

This subsection only allows United States magistrates to serve as special masters in prison conditions cases. Consequently, this provision ensures that only judicial officers, who have undergone the special appointment and screening process, will be acting for court. This helps ensure the appointment of appropriate individuals to perform the sensitive fact-finding functions in institutional litigation, which often has substantial public interest.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53 authorizes federal courts to appoint United States magistrates to serve as special masters in specified proceedings, with Article III granting Congress the power "from time to time to ordain and establish" "inferior courts." U.S. Const. Art. III, § 2. Article I grants Congress the power "to constitute Tribunal inferior to the supreme Court" and to "make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing Powers, and all others vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States." Art. I, § 8, cls. 9 & 18.

Cf. Perlsley, 820 F.2d 592 (3d Cir. 1987) (district attorney had no right to intervene in prison cap order requiring the release of pretrial detainees as he lacked a substantial interest pursuant to rule 24(a)(2)).

The former executive director of the Pennsylvania Prison Society, a prisoner liaison group, was appointed as the special master. The Committee has serious reservations whether such an appointment, where the master's impartiality might reasonably be promoted, promotes public confidence in federal judicial officers.
This subsection continues to give the court the discretion to use a special master to assist in resolving complicated factual issues on-the-record fact-finding, based upon record evidence.

In limiting the appointment of special masters to magistrates and in limiting the use of special masters to the purpose of aiding the court in fact-finding, this provision applies even to an agent of the court is titled or described by the court not as a master but as a receiver, master, master hearing officer, human rights committee, ombudsman, or consultant. The limitation in this provision on the selection and use of masters is intended to apply to anyone relied on by the court to make findings or to monitor or review compliance with, enforcement, or implementation of a consent decree or of court-ordered relief in a prison conditions suit.

Subsection (f): Attorney's fees

This subsection permits prisoners challenging prison conditions under 42 U.S.C. §1983 to receive attorney fees but reasonably limits the circumstances under which fees may be granted as to the amount of the fees.

This subsection limits awards of attorney fees in two ways. First, it narrows the judicially-created view of a "prevailing party" so that a prisoner's attorney will be reimbursed only for those fees reasonably and directly incurred in proving an actual violation of a federal right. Narrowing the definition of "prevailing party" will eliminate both attorney fees that penalize voluntary improvements in prison conditions and attorney fees incurred in litigating unsuccessful claims, regardless of whether they are related to meritorious claims. While this provision eliminates the financial incentive for prisoners to include numerous non-meritorious claims in averting institutional litigation, it retains the financial incentive to bring lawsuits properly focused on prison conditions that actually violate federal law.

Second, this provision has the effect of reducing attorney awards by eliminating fees for litigation other than that necessary to prove a violation of a federal right. This eliminates the financial incentive for attorneys to litigate ancillary matters, such as attorney fee petitions, and to seek extensive hearings on remand schemes.

Finally, this provision establishes a proportionality requirement for attorney fee awards. Under current law, the courts retain discretion to award attorney fees that greatly exceed the extent of the relief obtained by the plaintiff prisoners. This proportionality requirement will discourage burdensome litigation of insubstantial claims where the prisoner can establish a technical violation of a federal right but he suffered no real harm from the violation. The proportionality requirement appropriately reminds courts that the size of the attorney fee award must not unreasonably exceed the damages awarded for the proven violation.
TITLE IV. ENHANCING PROTECTION Against Incarcerated Criminals

Sec. 401. Prison security
This section amends Chapter 303 of title 18, United States Code, by adding section 4048.

Sec. 4048. Strength-training of prisoners prohibited
This section requires the Bureau of Prisons to ensure that: (1) federal prisoners do not engage in any physical activities designed to increase their fighting abilities; and (2) that all weight-lifting equipment and all equipment designed to increase the fighting abilities of prisoners be immediately removed from federal correctional facilities. This section only allows such equipment to be present in federal correctional facilities if approved by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons as part of a medically-required program of physical rehabilitation.

AGENCY VIEWS

The committee received a letter from the U.S. Department of Justice providing Administration views on H.R. 3, the "Taking Back Our Streets Act of 1995." This letter addressed the issues presented in H.R. 667 in pertinent part as follows:

V. TRUTH IN SENTENCING GRANTS

Title V of H.R. 3, in conjunction with §901 of the bill, would repeal the prison funding program enacted by title II of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, and replace it with a new program involving different standards. The new prison grants program, under the new program, would only allow the use of funds to increase, directly or indirectly, prison space for persons convicted of "serious violent felonies," which are essentially defined as violent crimes carrying a maximum prison term of 10 years or more.

Fifth percent of the funds ("general grants") would be reserved for states that, since 1993, have increased the incarceration rate, average time served, and percentage of sentence served for convicted violent offenders, or that average times served for murder, rape, robbery, and assault which exceed the national average by at least ten percent. The other fifty percent of grant funds ("truth in sentencing grants") would be reserved for states that have reduced the average times served for convicted violent offenders, or that give violent crimes with maxima of ten years or more, the bill's definition of certain offenses—murder, assault with intent to commit murder, arson, rape, assault with intent to commit rape, kidnapping, and armed robbery—are included. disbursed primarily in proportion to their general populations. The aggregate authorization for the program would be $10,499,600,000 over six years.

Before addressing the substantive provisions of the Title, a bizarre funding limitation contained in it merits comment. Under this provision, no funds may be spent for any other Crime Bill purpose unless Congress appropriates the full $10.5 billion for the prison grants.

This means that not a dollar can be spent to hire new police, add new FBI agents, fund Byrne Grants, fight rape or domestic violence, strengthen the border patrol, or keep schools open after-hours, unless the Congress commits the entire $10.5 billion sum proposed for the prison grants.

Thus, even if there are only a few qualifying applications for prison grant funds in a given year; even if no state or locality asks for funding to build new prisons; even if billions of dollars for prison construction remains unspent, year-after-year—Congress must continue to appropriate an average of $2 billion a year for more prison grants, every year, for the next five years, if it wants to have funding for even a single new police officer or federal law enforcement officer released.

Why Congress would want to hold thousands of police departments, prosecutors' offices, victims groups, and school districts hostage to its own future decisions about the level of appropriations for prison grants seems unclear. Why 100% of funding for new police should be cut-off if 1% of the funding for prison grants is reduced is a mystery. Why funding for a well-established program like the Byrne Grants should be slashed—as it would be under Title V of H.R. 3—if Congress chooses only to slow down the growth of a brand new program is unclear.

In addition to this strange funding rule, we oppose the substantive changes in this Title because we believe, in the end, they will result in fewer violent criminals being put behind bars than would implementation of the program enacted by the 1994 Crime Act.

First, in contrast to the enacted program's objective of increasing prison space and ensuring appropriate incarceration for all violent offenders, the proposed new program only authorizes funding to increase prison space for persons convicted of "serious violent felonies." It also only conditions eligibility for "truth in sentencing" grants (under proposed § 503) on the state's requiring that persons convicted of "serious violent felonies" serve at least 85% of the sentence. This approach effectively rewards states with lower statutory maxima for violent crimes, since in these states the category of offenders convicted of violent crimes with maxima of ten years or more ("serious violent felonies") is smaller, and hence they need to do less to satisfy the funding eligibility condition. In relation to the objective of ensuring adequate penalties for violent offenders, this approach of favoring states with lower maximum sentences is perverse.
This approach also places undue emphasis on the current conviction offense. The conviction offense often does not fully reflect the actual offense conduct because of plea bargaining, and an offender with a serious history of criminal violence may pose a grave threat to the public, even if his current conviction offense carries a statutory maximum of less than ten years. These points are appropriately recognized in the enacted legislation, which conditions eligibility for truth in sentencing grants on laws which requires that at least 85% of the sentence be served for all violent offenders, or laws requiring that at least 85% of the sentence be served for all violent recidivists, together with actual increases in incarceration rate, time served, and percentage of sentence served for the full class of violent offenders. In contrast, the proposed new program requires nothing with respect to the incarceration of violent offenders as a condition of eligibility for truth in sentencing grants, other than those whose current conviction is for a "serious violent felony" in the defined sense.

The eligibility criteria for general grants under proposed §502 are also problematic in relation to the proposed limitations on the use of grant funds, because grant funds could only be used to increase prison space for persons convicted of "serious violent felonies," but eligibility for the general grants would depend on increasing incarceration or having relatively high average time served for more broadly defined categories of violent offenders. However, the authorized use of grant funds should be commensurate with the class of offenders for whom increased incarceration is required.

Second, the proposed new program is inferior to the existing program in its conditions regarding recognition of victims' rights. Under the existing program, eligibility for both general grants and truth in sentencing grants is conditioned on "policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims." The Department of Justice has identified the following areas as implicating important rights and needs of crime victims: (1) notice to victims concerning case and offender status; (2) providing victims the opportunity to be present at all public court proceedings in their cases; (3) providing victims the opportunity to be heard at sentencing and parole hearings; (4) providing for restitution to victims; and (5) establishing administrative or other mechanisms to effectuate these rights. The need to provide appropriate recognition for victims' rights in these areas is being emphasized and elaborated in regulations and guidelines under the existing program.

In contrast, the proposed new program does not include victims' rights condition for general grants, and only requires an opportunity to be heard regarding sentencing release as a condition for truth in sentencing grants. Under this formulation, the Department of Justice would have no authority to impose the more far-reaching victims rights requirements that are being implemented under the existing program.

Third, the existing program provides for the disbursement of funds to eligible states primarily in proportion to part I violent crimes. In contrast, the proposed new program provides for the disbursement of such funds primarily in proportion to general population. This approach of disbursing funds for violent offender incarceration in proportion to general population, without regard to the incidence of violent crimes in the affected areas, will produce gross misallocations of resources in relation to actual need.

Hence, the proposed rewriting of the prison grants program in this title is an aggravated case of attempting to fix something that is not broken, and making it worse in the process. * * *

VII. STOPPING ABUSIVE PRISONER LAWSUITS

This title contains a set of reforms to help control abusive prisoner litigation. We support enactment of these provisions.

The Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act (42 U.S.C. section 1997e) currently authorizes federal courts to suspend section 1983 suits by prisoners for up to 180 days in order to require exhaustion of administrative remedies. Section 701 of this bill strengthens the administrative exhaustion rule in this context—and brings it more into line with administrative exhaustion rules that apply in other contexts—by generally prohibiting prisoners section 1983 lawsuits until administrative remedies are exhausted. The amendments in section 701 do not change the existing provisions that administrative remedies need be exhausted only if they are "plain, speedy, and effective," and satisfy minimum standards set out in the statute or are otherwise fair and effective. Hence, these amendments do not raise concerns that prisoners will be shut off from access to a federal forum by ineffectual or unreasonably slow administrative review processes.

Section 702 directs a court to dismiss a prisoner § 1983 suit if the court is satisfied that the action fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted or is frivolous or malicious. A rule of this type is desirable to minimize the burden on states of responding unnecessarily to prisoner suits, which typically lack merit and are often brought for purposes of harassment or recreation.

Section 703 deletes from the minimum standards for prison grievance system in 42 U.S.C. 1997e(b)(2) the requirement of an advisory role for employees and inmates (at the most decentralized level as is reasonably possible) in the formulation, implementation, and operation of the system. This removes the condition that has been the greatest impediment in the past to the willingness of state and local jurisdictions to seek certification for their grievance systems. It should be noted that this change will not necessarily require exhaustion of administrative remedies in prisoner § 1983 suits where exhaustion would not be required under existing law, since exhaustion can be required where the administrative remedies are “otherwise fair and effective”—even if the statutory minimum standards are not satisfied—and an advisory role for employees and inmates as provided in 42 U.S.C. 1997e(b)(2)(A) is not essential for fair and effective grievance systems.

Section 704 strengthens safeguards against and sanctions for false allegations of poverty by prisoners who seek to proceed in forma pauperis. Subsection (d) of 28 U.S.C. 1915 currently reads as follows: “The court may request an attorney to represent any such person unable to employ counsel and may dismiss the case if the allegation of poverty is untrue, or if satisfied that the action is frivolous or malicious.” Section 704(a) of the bill amends that subsection to read as follows: “The court may request an attorney to represent any such person unable to employ counsel shall at any time dismiss the case if the allegation of poverty is untrue, or if satisfied that the action fails to claim upon which relief may be granted or is frivolous or malicious even if partial filing fees have been impaid by the court.”

Section 704(b) of the bill adds a new subsection (f) to 28 U.S.C. 1915 which states that an affidavit of indigency by prisoner shall include a statement of all assets the prisoner possesses. The new subsection further directs the court to make inquiry of the correctional institution in which the prisoner is incarcerated for information available that institution relating to the extent of the prisoner’s assets. This is a reasonable precaution, because cannot prisoners on this subject cannot reliably be expected to make such inquiry themselves. The new subsection concludes by stating that the court shall require full or partial payment of filing fees in proportion to the prisoner’s ability to pay.” We would not read this language as limiting the court’s authority to require payment by the prisoner in installments, up to the amount of filing fees and other applicable costs, the prisoner lacks the means to make full payment.

ENDMENTS TO VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL AND LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT

This title repeals the prison grants program of title II.A of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. As noted earlier, title V of H.R. 401 repealed the drug courts funding program enacted by title V of the 1994 Act. * * *
Repeal of Drug Courts Program

Drug abuse is inherently criminogenic, and a large portion of all crime is drug-related. For too many abusers, a normal probationary sentence of confinement is likely to be just another shove in the revolving door. Conventional approaches to punishment have largely proven to be neither certain nor effective in this context.

In response to these realities, there has been a growth of interest in the past few years—by judges, executors, and others on the front lines of the criminal abuse problem—in the development of special programs which combine criminal sanctions with coerced abstinence for drug abusing offenders. These programs are known as “Drug Courts” typically include: (1) close supervision of participating offenders with threat and reality of more onerous conditions and sanctions (“graduated punishment”) for participants who do not comply with program requirements or fail to show satisfactory progress; (2) mandatory periodic drug testing which provides participants with the certain knowledge that they cannot escape the consequences of their actions and affords an objective measurements of progress; (3) mandatory participation in drug treatment; and (4) follow up measures which help to prevent relapses after the conclusion of the main part of the program, and facilitate transition to a law-abiding, productive existence.

These programs offer a critical alternative to the criminal justice system’s failure to subject drug abusing offenders to measures that are necessary to alter their behavior. The results suggest that these initiatives have enhanced the likelihood that the cycle of substance abuse and crime will be broken. Indeed, long-term research and evaluation of these approaches have demonstrated that they can be effective in reducing both drug abuse and drug-related crime. Programs involving these elements of intervention—close supervision, and coerced abstinence through mandatory drug testing and graduated punishment are the approaches that the drug court grant program of title V of the 1994 Crime Act will support.

Considering the seriousness of the criminal drug abuse problem, the limited efficacy of conventional measures in this area, and the promising results under drug court programs that have already been established, it is nonsensical to propose that the support that Congress has recently approved for these programs should be totally eliminated, and replaced with nothing. Hence, we oppose the proposal to repeal title V of the enacted legislation.

We believe, however, that the formulation of drug court program might legitimately be revised to permit the use of funds for more effective conventional prosecution in drug cases, rather than exclusively for programs that focus on controlling and altering the behavior of drug abusers. Effective enforcement requires not only efforts to reform drug abusers, but also aggressive measures to arrest, prosecute, and incapacitate the traffickers who prey on their addictions and weaknesses, and who account for so much of the criminal violence that mars the life of our nation. In furtherance of this objective, some jurisdictions have established or experimented with differentiated case management techniques or specialized courts that expedite drug case dispositions and otherwise enhance the effectiveness of prosecution.

These innovated methods also merit support and encouragement, and we would be amenable to amending the drug courts program to permit support for prosecution-oriented "drug courts" of this type as well. We would be pleased to work with interested members of Congress in so amending the drug courts funding program.

TITLE II—PRISONS

[Subtitle A—Violent Offender Incarceration and Truth in Sentencing Incentive Grants]

[SEC. 20101. GRANTS FOR CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES.]

(a) GRANT AUTHORIZATION.—The Attorney General may make grants to individual States and to States organized as multi-State compacts to construct, develop, expand, modify, operate, or improve correctional facilities, including boot camp facilities and other alternative correctional facilities that can free conventional prison space for the confinement of violent offenders, to ensure that prison cell space is available for the confinement of violent offenders and to implement truth in sentencing laws for sentencing violent offenders.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, a State or States organized as multi-State compacts shall submit an application to the Attorney General which includes—

(1) assurances that the State or States have implemented, or will implement, correctional policies and programs, including truth in sentencing laws that ensure that violent offenders serve a substantial portion of the sentences imposed, that are designed to provide sufficiently severe punishment for violent offenders, including violent juvenile offenders, and that the prison time served is appropriately related to the determination that the inmate is a violent offender and for a period of time deemed necessary to protect the public;

(2) assurances that the State or States have implemented policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims;

(3) assurances that funds received under this section will be used to construct, develop, expand, modify, operate, or improve correctional facilities to ensure that prison cell space is available for the confinement of violent offenders;

(4) assurances that the State or States have a comprehensive correctional plan which represents an integrated approach to the management and operation of correctional facilities and programs and which includes diversion programs, particularly drug diversion programs, community corrections programs, prisoner screening and security classification system, appropriate professional training for corrections officers in dealing with violent offenders, prisoner rehabilitation and treatment programs, prisoner work activities (including, to the extent practical skills assessment, and assistance to the local fiscal agents of the criminal justice system and to the States, counties, or any other governmental units that are overconstrained;

(5) assurances that the State or States have implemented or will implement, policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims;

(6) assurances that the State or States have implemented policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims;

(7) assurances that the State or States have implemented policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims;

(8) assurances that the State or States have implemented policies that provide for the recognition of the rights and needs of crime victims;

practicable, activities relating to the development, expansion, modification, or improvement of correctional facilities) and job skills programs, educational programs, a pre-release prisoner assessment to provide risk reduction management, post-release assistance, and an assessment of recidivism rates;

(5) assurances that the State or States have involved counties and other units of local government, when appropriate, in the construction, development, expansion, modification, operation or improvement of correctional facilities designed to ensure the incarceration of violent offenders, and that the State or States will share funds received under this section with counties and other units of local government, taking into account the burden placed on these units of government when they are required to confine sentenced prisoners because of overcrowding in State prison facilities;

(6) assurances that funds received under this section will be used to supplement, not supplant, other Federal, State, and local funds;

(7) assurances that the State or States have implemented, or will implement within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, policies to determine the veteran status of inmates and to ensure that incarcerated veterans receive the veterans benefits to which they are entitled;

(8) if applicable, documentation of the multi-State compact agreement that specifies the construction, development, expansion, modification, operation, or improvement of correctional facilities; and

(9) if applicable, a description of the eligibility criteria for prisoner participation in any boot camp that is to be funded.

(c) CONSIDERATION.—The Attorney General, in making such grants, shall give consideration to the special burden placed on States which incarcerate a substantial number of inmates who are in the United States illegally.

SEC. 20102. TRUTH IN SENTENCING INCENTIVE GRANTS.

TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE

PART II—CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

CHAPTER 229—POSTSENTENCE ADMINISTRATION

SUBCHAPTER C—IMPRISONMENT

Appropriate remedies with respect to prison crowding

(a) Requirement of Showing With Respect to the Plaintiff Particular.—

(1) Holding.—A Federal court shall not hold prison or jail crowding unconstitutional under the eighth amendment except to the extent that an individual plaintiff inmate proves that the crowding causes the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment of that inmate.

(2) Relief.—The relief in a case described in paragraph (1) shall extend no further than necessary to remove the conditions that are causing the cruel and unusual punishment of the plaintiff inmate.

(b) Inmate Population Ceilings.—
[(1) REQUIREMENT OF SHOWING WITH RESPECT TO PARTICULAR PRISONERS.—A Federal court shall not place a ceiling on the inmate population of any Federal, State, or local detention facility as an equitable remedial measure for conditions that violate the eighth amendment unless crowding is inflicting cruel and unusual punishment on particular identified prisoners.

(2) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not be construed to have any effect on Federal judicial power to issue equitable relief other than that described in paragraph (1), including the requirement of improved medical or health care, and the imposition of civil contempt fines or damages, when such relief is appropriate.

(c) PERIODIC REOPENING.—Each Federal court order or consent decree seeking to remedy an eighth amendment violation shall be reopened at the behest of a defendant for recommended modification at a minimum of 2-year intervals.]

§3626. Appropriate remedies with respect to prison conditions

(a) REQUIREMENTS FOR RELIEF.—

(1) LIMITATIONS ON PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—Prospective relief in a civil action with respect to prison conditions shall extend no further than necessary to remove the conditions that are causing the deprivation of the Federal rights of individual plaintiffs in that civil action. The court shall not grant or approve any prospective relief unless the court finds that such relief is narrowly drawn and the least intrusive means to remedy the violation of the Federal right. In determining the intrusiveness of the relief, the court shall give substantial weight to any adverse impact on public safety or the operation of a criminal justice system caused by the relief.

(2) PRISON POPULATION REDUCTION RELIEF.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, the court shall not grant or approve any relief whose purpose or effect is to reduce or limit the prison population, unless the plaintiff proves that crowding is the primary cause of the deprivation of the Federal right and no other relief will remedy that deprivation.

(b) TERMINATION OF RELIEF.—

(1) AUTOMATIC TERMINATION OF PROSPECTIVE RELIEF AFTER 2-YEAR PERIOD.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, any prospective relief shall automatically terminate 2 years after the later of—

(A) the date the court found the violation of a Federal right that was the basis for the relief; or

(B) the date of the enactment of the Stop Turning Out Prisoners Act.

(2) IMMEDIATE TERMINATION OF PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, a defendant or intervenor shall be entitled to the immediate termination of any prospective relief, if that relief was approved or granted in the absence of a finding by the court that prison conditions violated a Federal right.

(c) PROCEDURE FOR MOTIONS AFFECTING PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—
(1) GENERALLY.—The court shall promptly rule on any motion to modify or terminate prospective relief in a civil action with respect to prison conditions.

(2) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Any prospective relief subject to a pending motion shall be automatically stayed during the period—

(A) beginning on the 30th day after such motion is filed, in the case of a motion made under subsection (b); and

(B) beginning on the 180th day after such motion is filed, in the case of a motion made under any other law; and ending on the date the court enters a final order ruling on that motion.

d) STANDING.—Any Federal, State, or local official or unit of government—

(1) whose jurisdiction or function includes the prosecution or custody of persons in a prison subject to; or

(2) who otherwise is or may be affected by;

relief whose purpose or effect is to reduce or limit the prison population shall have standing to oppose the imposition or continuance in effect of that relief and may intervene in any proceeding relating to that relief. Standing shall be liberally conferred under this subsection so as to effectuate the remedial purposes of this section.

e) SPECIAL MASTERS.—In any civil action in a Federal court with respect to prison conditions, any special master or monitor shall be United States magistrate and shall make proposed findings on the record on complicated factual issues submitted to that special master or monitor by the court, but shall have no other function. The parties may not by consent extend the function of a special master beyond that permitted under this subsection.

f) ATTORNEY’S FEES.—No attorney’s fee under section 722 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (42 U.S.C. 1988) may be granted to a plaintiff in a civil action with respect to prison conditions except to the extent such fee is—

(1) directly and reasonably incurred in proving an actual violation of the plaintiff’s Federal rights; and

(2) proportionally related to the extent the plaintiff obtains court ordered relief for that violation.

g) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term “prison” means any Federal, State, or local facility that incarcerates or detains juveniles or adults accused of, convicted of, sentenced for, or adjudicated delinquent for, violations of criminal law;

(2) the term “relief” means all relief in any form which may be granted or approved by the court, and includes consent decrees and settlement agreements; and

(3) the term “prospective relief” means all relief other than compensatory monetary damages.

PART III—PRISONS AND PRISONERS
CHAPTER 303—BUREAU OF PRISONS

§4048. Strength-training of prisoners prohibited

The Bureau of Prisons shall ensure that—

(1) prisoners under its jurisdiction do not engage in any physical activities designed to increase their fighting ability; and

(2) all equipment designed for increasing the strength fighting ability of prisoners promptly be removed from Federal correctional facilities and not be introduced into such facilities thereafter except as needed for a medically required program of physical rehabilitation approved by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons.

DISSENTING VIEWS

We support the stated purpose of this bill, which is “to control crime by incarcerating violent criminals.” We want more prisons cells built to put more violent felons in prison for longer periods of time.

However, we take strong exception to this bill, because we believe it will do just the opposite of what it pretends to do. Because of serious flaws in concept and drafting, H.R. 667 would actually result in significantly less prison cells for violent felons than the prison grant program in the bi-partisan crime bill we passed last year, the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994.

A balanced and effective program for reducing violent crime must devote substantial resources to prison cells for violent felons. One appropriate role for the federal government is to help the States with funds to build and operate correctional facilities.

A proper comity allows the States flexibility in how to use such federal prison grant funds. In some cases, those funds might most efficiently be used for new space directly to house violent felons. In other cases, it makes more sense to build alternative correctional facilities in order to free up existing appropriate space for housing violent felons.

In either case, the end result is the same—sufficient appropriate cell space in all of the States to ensure that violent felons are locked up for longer periods of time.

The law enacted last year embodies this comity. It created two pools of grant funds. One pool is for States that have enacted tough “Truth-in-Sentencing” laws. The other is for States willing to take a series of carefully drafted assurances designed to ensure that the State is moving expeditiously toward the goal of longer prison time for violent felons.

Recognizing that the process of enacting and implementing “Truth-in-Sentencing” laws in the States is a lengthy affair at best, and difficult if not impossible at worst, the 1994 law allows funds used in the tougher “Truth-in-Sentencing” pool to flow over into the more readily available general pool.

The bill before us resembles the 1994 Crime Bill in outer form. It, too, creates two pools of funds.

There the resemblance ends, however.

Correctional system experts in the Department of Justice and elsewhere say that as few as three States can qualify for funding under either pool in this bill. Even if one doubles that number in excess of generous caution, it is clear beyond doubt that these funds will go to only a tiny minority of the States in the foreseeable future.

In short, this grant program is a mirage. It will not build the prison cells for violent felons we want to see built at any time in the foreseeable future.
This results from four serious defects in the bill. First, the terms of the so-called “Truth-in-Sentencing” pool are so severe that States will be required to commit themselves to investing enormous sums up front in order even to qualify for this pool. Second, the literal words of the so-called “General Grant” pool of funds requires States to make assurances about matters which, by definition, cannot be known until some years hence. This section requires a State to make assurances that, since 1993, it has increased (i) the percentage of convicted violent felons sentenced to prison, (ii) the “average prison time actually to be served” by those felons, and (iii) the “percentage of sentence to be actually served” by those felons.

States can and make assurances about the first of these assuming they have an adequate data base. However, the other two are problematic at best. How can a State make assurances about how long felons will actually serve, or what percentage of their sentences they will actually serve, until the date has passed upon which the felons have been actually released? Since most violent felons are sentenced to terms significantly longer than the two years that have passed since 1993, it would seem impossible for most States, if not all, to meet the literal terms of this language.

It may be that the intent of the drafters is otherwise, as was represented in the markup of this bill. Unfortunately, that intent’s poorly and inadequately conveyed in this bill, which has not incidentally been rushed through committee with neither adequate hearing nor deliberate evaluation.

Third, the language of the special rules for States with indeterminant sentencing is impossibly vague. Those rules ostensibly permit such a State to qualify for grant funds if “the average time served” for “murder, rape, robbery, and assault” exceed by 1 percent or greater “the national average of time served for such offenses.”

This raises a number of apparently insoluble questions. First, no such “national average” is known to exist, according to the experts our staff has consulted.

Second, it will be impossible to construct such a national average until several fundamental questions of definition are resolved. The several States define the listed offenses in different ways. That being so, which offenses from each State should be included in the national average? Over what period of time is the average to be based? How often is it to be computed? Who or what agency is supposed to compute it?

Third, each individual State will be vexed by the same unanswered questions. Which of its offense that arguably fall in grossly general terms in the bill should it include in computing its “average”? Since, by definition, the average in an indeterminant sentencing State will constantly fluctuate, when and over what period of time should it compute its average?

1 Mr. Schumer offered an amendment that would have cured every one of these defects, and would have been completely in consonance with the often stated goal of the majority to give maximum due to states rights. His amendment would simply have converted this program to a block grant program for the states, under which each would get a share proportionate to the rate of violent crime. This idea is in concept indistinguishable from the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant program the majority offers in another bill, H.R. 668.
Finally, this bill lacks a "pour over" clause so that funds not expended in the "Truth-in-Sentencing" pool will be put to useful purpose. Instead, it allows either the few States that may qualify to split up an enormous windfall (the pot remaining after allocating a reserve for all States), or the funds to sit idle until sufficient States have been strong-armed into complying with this bill's terms.

These flaws are more evidence that this bill has been rammed through committee without adequate deliberation. If the majority wanted to build more prison cells for violet offenders as cheaply and efficiently as possible, it would have enthusiastically embraced our block grant amendment. Given the trickle of funds that will actually emerge from the ponderous language in H.R. 667, we are forced to wonder this bill is actually intended to cut significant spending out of our national crime program.

Flaws in this bill will inflict a bad policy on America. It will not move it forward.
