VI. RETIREMENT MEMOIRS

Vice President Kennedy reported the retirement of sixteen faculty members. The following retirement memoirs were adopted.

FRANCIS A. ALLEN, Edson R. Sunderland Professor of Law, retired from active service on May 31, 1986. As former dean of the Law School and as one of the nation's most distinguished legal educators and legal scholars, Professor Allen has made enduring contributions to the university, to his students, and to the nation.

A graduate of Cornell College with an A.B. degree in 1941 and of Northwestern University Law School with an L.L.B. degree in 1946, Professor Allen served as a member of the law faculties of Northwestern, Harvard University, and the University of Chicago before coming to Michigan as dean of the Law School in 1966. The five years of his tenure as dean, the most tumultuous in the history of American higher education, were marked by unprecedented demands upon universities. His leadership was critical to the strengthening of the school's intellectual foundations that occurred during this period.

Over the past two decades, Professor Allen has written often and profoundly regarding the aims of legal education. He is widely regarded as the nation's leading spokesman for a humanistic conception of legal education. The qualities of mind that a university education seeks to develop are exemplified in Professor Allen's writing and in his teaching. Generations of students have recognized in him a model to which they might aspire, a lawyer whose learning is as broad as it is deep and whose understanding of human problems is both wise and humane.

His primary scholarly contributions have been in the field of criminal law in well over one-hundred books and articles. As one of the nation's preeminent criminal law scholars, Professor Allen has frequently been called upon to render public service. Among his most notable contributions are his chairmanship of the committee that drafted the Illinois Criminal Code of 1961, widely regarded as a model for legislation on the subject, and his service as chairman of the Attorney General's Commission on Poverty and the Administration of Criminal Justice, whose recommendations led directly to the enactment of the Criminal Justice Act of 1964 and the Bail Reform Act of 1966.

Professor Allen's preeminence as a legal educator and legal scholar have brought him frequent and deserved recognition. He has been awarded honorary degrees by Cornell College, Northwestern University, and the University of Victoria and has served as president of the Association of American Law Schools. He has delivered the Holmes Lecture at Harvard, the Storrs Lecture at Yale, and innumerable named lectures at other universities in the United States and abroad. In 1979, he was named the Henry Russel Lecturer at The University of Michigan, the highest honor that the university can bestow upon a member of the faculty.

The Regents salute this distinguished scholar and educator by naming Francis A. Allen Edson R. Sunderland Professor Emeritus of Law.

CHARLES W. CARES, JR., Professor of Landscape Architecture, School of Natural Resources, and Director, Nichols Arboretum, retired from active faculty status as of May 31, 1986, after a productive career as teacher, administrator and counselor.

Professor Cares received his A.B. degree from Allegheny College in 1939, his B.S. degree from Michigan State University in 1950, and his M.L.A. degree from Harvard University in 1958.

Having joined the University as associate professor of landscape architecture in 1959, Professor Cares was promoted to professor in 1964. In 1969, his appointment as chair of the Department of Landscape Architecture was approved by the Board of Regents. He continued with that responsibility until December 1978. Landscape quality of man-dominated environments, rural and urban, has been his research area and he has taken an active part in the planning of Ann Arbor Township, including chairing the Ann Arbor Township Planning Board and Ann Arbor Township Zoning Board of Appeals.

Professor Cares had a variety of work experiences before coming to this university. He managed a family florist business in Cleveland following graduation from Allegheny College, and in 1941, entered the U.S. Navy, where he attained the rank of lieutenant commander. From 1946-48, he was in partnership in a sporting goods store in Meadville, Pennsylvania, and in 1950 joined the landscape architecture firm of Ralph E. Griswold and Associates. He was appointed associate professor of landscape design at Cornell University in the Department of Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture, and worked with F.W. Edmondson, Jr., landscape architect of Ithaca, where he was responsible for the planting and site plans for the freshmen dormitory group at Cornell University and Cayuga Heights School. He still actively serves as a private consultant in landscape architecture and land planning.

Since 1955, Professor Cares has been a member of the American Society of Landscape Architecture and has been the Michigan liaison with the national chair for historic preservation. He is a registered landscape architect in the states of New York and Michigan.

The Regents now salute Charles W. Cares for his dedicated service by naming him Professor Emeritus of Landscape Architecture.

DAVID G. DICKINSON, M.D., Professor of Pediatrics and Communicable Diseases, retired from active faculty status as of June 30, 1986, when he concluded a career of teaching, research, clinical and administrative service which spanned more than three decades.

Professor Dickinson was born in Blissfield, Michigan. He received his B.S. degree from Adrian College in 1942 and attended The University of Michigan Medical School, while serving as a Private First Class in the U.S. Army under the A.S.T.P. program, graduating in 1945. After being discharged with the rank of captain, Professor Dickinson returned to University Hospital to complete his pediatric residency. In 1950, he was appointed as a clinical instructor and in 1952 as a research associate and director of the respirator center. Under his direction the pediatrics department developed one of the most outstanding centers for the total rehabilitation of patients afflicted with poliomyelitis. Professor Dickinson soon expanded his clinical and research interests and expertise into the management of the multiply handicapped child. His vast experience and clinical acumen led to his service on numerous regional and national committees, having served
