U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan, shares his father's love of law, commitment to the University, and sense of public duty. The endowment also includes prior gifts from Judge Cohn to the Irwin I. Cohn Faculty Research Fund, the Avern L. Cohn Fund for the Advancement of Michigan Law, and the Irwin I. and Avern Cohn Dean's Discretionary Fund. Avern Cohn has been a consistent participant in the life of the Law School through his membership on the Committee of Visitors, as a frequent speaker at the Law School, and as a visiting professor.

Malamud received her B.A. magna cum laude from Wesleyan University College and her J.D. cum laude from the University of Chicago Law School. She clerked for the Hon. Louis H. Pollak of the U.S. District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and for the Hon. Harry A. Blackmun of the U.S. Supreme Court. She practiced law in Washington, D.C., for several years and has been a member of the Law School faculty since 1992.

A specialist in labor and employment law and constitutional law, Malamud has written on civil rights with an emphasis on affirmative action, and the intersection of class and law. She is known for her supportive work with students and won the Law School's L. Hart Wright teaching award in spring 2001. She is a member of the executive committee of the University's Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations and is a faculty associate in the Program on American Culture.

The James E. and Sarah A. Degan Professorship is supported by an endowment created through a bequest by the late Sarah A. Degan, a long-time resident of Detroit. Malamud succeeds Theodore J. St. Antoine, '54, as the James E. and Sarah A. Degan Professor. Her succession to the professorship is especially fitting because both she and St. Antoine are held in high esteem for their work in labor law and their engagement in social justice. (An excerpt of Professor Emeritus St. Antoine's address last May to the College of Labor and Employment Lawyers in Washington, D.C., begins on page 95.)

Eric Stein, '42, wins University of Michigan Press Award

Eric Stein, '42, the Hessel E. Yntema Professor Emeritus of Law, has been won the 2001 University of Michigan Press Book Award.

This is the second time that Stein has won the award. The first was for Diplomats, Scientists and Politicians: The United States and the Nuclear Test Ban Negotiations (1966), which he wrote with the late Harold K. Jacobson.

This year, the University of Michigan Press honored Stein for "his literary accomplishments, particularly Thoughts from a Bridge: A Retrospective of Writings on New Europe and American Federalism, and the breadth and depth of his scholarly contributions to international law."

"The essays collected here cover a generation of scholarship," New York University School of Law Professor Joseph H.H. Weiler writes in the foreword to Thoughts from a Bridge (University of Michigan Press, 2000). "Each essay has the power to assault our present day sensibilities with their abiding relevance to the most current debates. . . . Unfolding in this volume is the intellectual life of a master Europeanist, internationalist, and comparativist." Weiler is a former member of the University of Michigan Law School faculty.

A young lawyer at the time, Stein fled from his native Czechoslovakia in 1939 to escape the Nazis. He earned a second law degree at the U-M Law School in 1942 and worked for the U.S. Department of State before joining the Law School faculty in 1955. He has served as an adviser to the U.S. delegation to the UN General Assembly and Security Council and to the U.S. counsel at the International Court of Justice. He has lectured widely in the United States, Europe, Japan, and China. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the International Law Association and an associate member of the International Academy of Comparative Law.
