A Panel Discussion:

Slavery Against the Law

Enslavement and Human Trafficking in Historical Perspective, from the Amistad Captives (1839) to Siliadin v. France (2005)

Thursday, October 6, 2011, 4:00–6:00 P.M.

250 Hutchins Hall, U of M Law School

Chair: Martha S. Jones Law, History, and Department of Afroamerican and African Studies, University of Michigan

Michael Zeuske, History, University of Köln, Germany

Rethinking the Case of the Schooner Amistad: Contraband and Complicity

Ibrahima Thioub History, UCAD-Dakar, Senegal

Persistent Stigma: Bloodlines, Color Lines and the Memory of Slavery in West Africa

Rebecca J. Scott Law and History, University of Michigan

Adélaïde Durand and Iwa Akofa Siliadin: The Dynamics of Enslavement in 1810 and 1994

Comment: Christopher McCrudden Law, Queen’s University Belfast, University of Michigan, and Oxford

Discussion: The Audience

For further information and updates, or access to the UM CTools limited-access website containing papers, please contact Rebecca Scott at rjscott@umich.edu and Graham Nessler at gnessler@umich.edu.

Sponsored by the University of Michigan’s Program in Race, Law & History and the Law in Slavery and Freedom Project, with support from the African Studies Center, the Department of History, the Institute for the Humanities, the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies, and Faith (AB ’69) and Stephen (JD ’69, AB ’66) Brown.