

Bio

Gilad Abiri is a Master's candidate in the Zvi Meitar Center for Advanced Legal Studies in Tel Aviv University Law Faculty. His Thesis titled “Deliberative Pluralism” is being conducted under the supervision of Prof. Menachem Mautner. The thesis explores the interrelationship of two major moral and political theories: Value Pluralism and Deliberative Democracy.

Gilad is a graduate of the Adi Lautman Interdisciplinary Program for Outstanding Students in Tel Aviv University where he focused on law, political science and philosophy. In recent years, Gilad has served as a teaching assistant in various subjects including contract law and law and religion. Gilad is currently a Fox International Fellow at the MacMillan Center in Yale University, where he is working on a project exploring the challenges moral panics pose for democratic regimes. In the coming academic year, he will be attending the LL.M program in Yale Law School.