General Comments/Overview

By Billie Reich; Grievance Coordinator, M.S.P

Montana State Prison continues to see many changes in the grievance process. OMIS is finally up and running, the tracking system seems to be working with very little glitches. Due to the process being complete Kris Studeny and Billie Reich worked on a standardized report format that is being utilized by all facilities. The idea was to have areas reported the same across the board, in the past it was very hard to give accurate information with staff tracking information differently.

Another change that occurred this year was the start of the grievance quarterly reporting sessions with all facilities conferencing via phone. The information that is shared is very important and administration sees firsthand what issues are pressing inside their facility.

Mail issues continue to be a pressing issue, the different areas include publications, legal mail interpretations, and undeliverable not being received by the inmate or mailroom in a timely fashion. Deputy Warden Ross Swanson has taken a proactive stance in making sure that the issues get addressed and helps with procedure changes as they arise.

Lastly, the biggest change to the grievance process was the elimination of the legal department drafting suggested responses to the Director. Suggested responses are now drafted by the Grievance Coordinators and sent to the Director’s Office. Each grievance is reviewed by the staff member that did not issue the initial response; this ensures that an outside review process is occurring. The new process has brought continuity in the responses and a chance for the grievance coordinators to work closely with the Director’s Office on pressing issues.
Montana Women’s Prison’s grievance coordinator, Charlotte Dolezal, reports that she saw an increase in informal resolutions from D Pod starting in November which she believes is a direct correlation with the end of the ICP unit and the beginning of the “orientation” pod. The Orientation pod had a learning curve as all new programs do and we were able to establish procedures and decide about new issues. The conflict seemed to come from returning inmates who were not interested in the change and wanted to go straight to the floor, but as the year continued complaints lessened and have nearly dissipated since that time.

*High number “not processed” due to change in action request policy stipulation.

Mrs. Dolezal states that the all information indicates that issues are being handled at the informal level as only 4% were appealed through the director’s office. Although, one issue of concern is the amount of staff conduct grievances that are submitted. It appears that the offenders feel that their issues are not taken serious, therefore it has been discussed and even if an investigation is completed the offender will be allowed to submit the formal grievance so that administration is able to review the complaint.

Great Falls Regional Prison had a significant amount of change in its grievance staff again this year. Officer Corey McKinney, whom had been grievance coordinator for several months, has changed positions. Officer William Komar was than selected as grievance coordinator. It appears that Officer Komar has a good understand of the grievance procedure and has knowledge of the facilities operations which is helpful when dealing with problems or areas of concern.
Mr. Wayne Bye, Contract Monitor, has been of assistance in handling of grievances and addressing issues before they are filed. He indicates that he believes that staff changes in the facility have been for the better. The numbers indicate a decrease in filed grievance, it appears the inmate population is getting the response and action they feel is appropriate on the informal resolution.

* Dawson County Correctional Facility * continues to see a higher number of grievances when compared to facilities with similar amount of offenders in the system. Officer Wayne Heimbuch is currently the grievance coordinator/hearing officer. Earlier in the year Billie Reich traveled to the regional facilities to complete an audit of the grievance system. There were several issues of concern, such as the tracking of grievances and written responses that were being provided to the offenders. After the audit a follow up session was scheduled and it appeared the facility had made the corrective changes that were need to comply with procedure. The utilization of the standardized grievance report has brought clarity to the process and administrators are able to track the different areas of concern.
Crossroads Correctional Center  Brandy Sherrard the Grievance coordinator at CCC continues to maintain a high level of pride when responding to grievances. Again, I believe the standardized report format gave better direction to the facility on how to track grievances.
The total numbers of DOC formal grievances submitted have decreased by 218 from FY 2009. Staff attribute this to being in the units more often and spending time working with inmates before the issue become bad enough that the Inmates grieve the department. The total numbers of not processed grievances have also decreased; grievance staffs have stated they believe that this is due to the education that is being given to the population. The percentage of granted and denied are close to the same, there is no real indicator except that staff are consistent in their responses to offenders.

The total numbers of warden level appeals have increased in FY 2010. The policy and procedure changed to have a 4 step process for the medical grievances. Previous to this the procedure passed the warden step going straight to the director level. Although, having this step added has increased the warden level appeals this added step gives the medical director Dr. Rantz a chance to review all complaints and issues.
The DOC Director level appeals have also increased this year, looking that the number of issues Billie Reich attributed this increase to the number of staff conduct grievance submitted as while as the number of policy request changes. Staff conduct grievance and policy changes are answered on the first level by the warden and/or designee therefore the warden level appeal is bypassed. With that being said the total number of staff conduct grievances have increased by 1% or 3 grievances and policy change request by 3% or 14 grievances.

Conclusion: Annual reports from each facility were reviewed and compared to FY2009 for this report. These reports are on file with the Technical Correction Services Bureau Chief and are available upon request. All Coordinators are encouraged to review their reports regularly with their administrators and to pay close attention to increased numbers involving particular types of complaints, or involving particular departments, units or staff members. By reviewing them regularly, any problems or pending grievances or appeals can be identified and resolved.

A special thank you goes out to Billie Reich and Kris Studeny. These two individuals took extra steps to work on a standardized grievance report form which has resulted in more accurate reporting. The dedication these two individuals have given to ensure that there is consistency and continuity within the grievance program and that the grievance policy and procedure are followed, not just at MSP, but in the contract facilities, is commendable.
